Members of the Hague Conference

The procedure for becoming a Member State of the Hague Conference involves three steps:
1. Candidate State applies for membership
2. Member States decide admission of Candidate State within six months by majority vote
3. Following an affirmative vote, Candidate State accepts Statute, thereby becoming a Member State

77 States (the EU as such is also a Member of the Hague Conference, which thus has 78 Members)

Candidate State
State that has applied for membership and for which the six-month voting period is running (with indication of end of voting period)
- Andorra (1 June 2015)
- Moldova (25 September 2015)

Admitted State
State that has applied for membership and has been admitted by affirmative vote, but which still needs to accept Statute to become a Member State
- Colombia (admitted 2006)
- Lebanon (admitted 2010)
- Armenia (admitted 2014)

Member State
77 States (the EU as such is also a Member of the Hague Conference, which thus has 78 Members)

NB: Boundaries shown on this map are based upon those used by the United Nations Cartographic Section and are indicative only. They should not be taken to imply official endorsement or acceptance by either the Hague Conference or the United Nations.