Aperçu des réponses au Questionnaire relatif à la Convention de La Haye du 18 mars 1970 sur l'obtention des preuves à l'étranger en matière civile ou commerciale (Doc. prélim. No 4)

Synopsis of the replies to the Questionnaire relating to the Hague Convention of 18 March 1970 on the Taking of Evidence Abroad in Civil or Commercial Matters (Prel. Doc. No 4)

Afin d'éviter tout contresens, les réponses sont reproduites ci-dessous dans leur langue et présentation originales (suppressions ou corrections indiquées par des crochets [] – texte en caractères gras sélectionné par le BP). Les réponses complètes sont disponibles sur le site Internet de la Conférence (www.hcch.net - sous « Travaux en cours ») ainsi qu'un rapport établi par ABA (American Bar Association)

In order to avoid any misrepresentation, the replies are reproduced below in their original form and language (withdrawals or corrections indicated by brackets [] – text in bold selected by PB). The full replies are available on the Conference's website (www.hcch.net - under "Work in progress") as well as a report drawn up by ABA (American Bar Association).

| | Under U.S. law, 28 United States Code 1782, foreign judicial authorities or parties to proceedings can request the assistance of U.S. courts for the taking of evidence in support of a civil action without filing a request through the Convention. No data are available to determine the number of such requests, but it may well be that most foreign requests are made in the United States without resort to the Convention. Indeed, there are no reported cases from the United Kingdom since 2000. A statistical table from the U.S. Department of Justice Civil Division (the U.S. Central Authority) is attached at Annex C covering the calendar years 2000 – 2003 [see the annexe on the Conference's website], showing total numbers of Hague Convention cases ranging from a high of 510 in 2000 to a low of 348 in 2002 [431 in 2001, 348 in 2002]. | Etats-Unis | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |

| | Très peu de cantons ont des statistiques. Le canton de Bâle-Ville nous indique qu'il a reçu, en 2002, 9 requêtes relatives à des auditions de témoins et 4 requêtes relatives à la production d'actes ou à des demandes de renseignements. Du 1 ^{er} janvier 2003 au 15 septembre 2003, le canton de Vaud a reçu 11 requêtes en provenance du Portugal, 1 requête en provenance de l'Espagne, 1 requête en provenance de la Bulgarie et 1 requête en provenance de la Turquie. Le canton de Saint-Gall nous annonce 18 requêtes pour 2002 en provenance de la Slovaquie, de la République tchèque, de la Turquie, de l'Italie, de l'Espagne et du Portugal. Du 1 ^{er} janvier 2003 au 30 juin 2003, le canton de Saint-Gall a reçu 7 requêtes en provenance de la Slovaquie, de la Turquie, de l'Espagne et du Portugal. Le canton de Berne a reçu 14 requêtes en 2001 et en 2002. Enfin, le canton de Glaris estime recevoir entre 5 et 10 requêtes par année. | Suisse | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |

| 3. Practical difficulties? | There are no available statistics. Until now, very few requests have been received and forwarded to obtain evidence under the Convention. It is roughly estimated that 16 requests have been forwarded and received to obtain evidence. We do not have accurate statistics relating to the number of requests to obtain evidence addressed Norway. However, in 2002 we received 322 rogatory letters in civil matters and sent 339 rogatory letters abroad. Up to 1 October 2003 we have received 239 rogatory letters from abroad and we have sent 299 rogatory letters. This statistics include all rogatory letters, both requests regarding service of documents and taking of evidence, both to and from states parties to the Hague Conventions, and also to and from other states. Although the Attorney-General's Department is the Central Authority competent to receive letters of requests from another Contracting State, in each State and Territory the Registrar or Prothonotary of the Supreme Court has been designated as an additional authority under Article 24 of the Convention. However in practice letters of request and other enquiries are referred to State or Territory law Departments. Complete statistics are not held centrally. For internal purposes, data provided by the Länder on the extent of the mutual legal assistance are compiled annually in an overview (service of process, mutual assistance and other requests). Since is not possible to conduct a precise statistical analysis without investing more than a reasonable degree of effort, the overview only contains a rough outline. I have attached the current overview as Annex 2 [see the full replies and annexes to the Service-Questionnaire on the website]. No, As to the requests to obtain evidence abroad made in Dutch courts, generally speaking the ways offered by the Hague Evidence Convention are seldomly used. Attorneys prefer to examine witnesses in the courts where the proceedings in the Netherlands are held. Reasons for this preference are that these witnesses are examined by a member of the court dealing with the case, who is delegated to hearing the witnesses, and that in such case these attorneys have the opportunity to instantaneously add questions to the original ones, which allows them to disclose more information than through a letter of requests (commission rogatoire) which has to specify in advance the evidence to be obtained or the questions to be put to the persons to be examined. Court decisions show that even if attorneys agree in the examining of witnesses abroad, courts are often not willing to send letters of request and insist on the hearing of witnesses in their court room. Ukraine has not received requests from States Parties under this Convention [PB: The Convention is entered into force in Ukraine the 1st April 2001]. [Le Canada n'est pas partie à cette Convention - Voir les réponses complètes sur le site Internet]. | | The Swedish Central Authority has not encountered any practical difficulties connected with the application of the Convention. We have no clear picture about how the Convention works for our courts as requesting authorities. But our image is that the experience is that it sometimes takes too long to get requests executed. | Suède |
| | The reduced use of the Hague Evidence Convention is caused also by the fact that the letters of request are differently dealt with by the different courts abroad. An additional negative impact is due to the experience that this way of examining witnesses is time-taking ; it lasts relatively long between the sending of the letter of request and the reception of the answers. An impeding factor, too, is created by the many formal hurdles which may often result in a refusal of the requested court after opposition of the witness to be heard. | Pays-Bas |
| | No difficulties have been encountered, except for particular cases connected with absence of strictly formulated questions for questioning and with specific requirements for the blood tests – to be taken, kept and transported in a certain manner, which requirements we cannot always fulfil strictly. These, however, are rather difficulties of practical and not of legal character. | Bulgarie |
| | L'application en soi de la Convention ne pose pas ou peu de problèmes. Les requêtes ne sont toutefois pas toujours claires, souvent en raison de mauvaises traductions. | Suisse |
| | The practical difficulties encountered at the execution of the requests are:-(1) there is often no translation for certain requests not made in either of the official languages of Hongkong (Chinese and English); (2) the appointment of agents to execute the request has not been clearly specified even though that is often the intention of the requesting party. | Chine (Hongkong) |
| | Frequently, the letter of request is not sufficiently specific to satisfy the provisions of Article 3(f) of the 1970 Convention, and reliance is often place more on the statement of the subject matter rather than the individual questions to be put to the persons to be examined. Furthermore, there have been instances of non-compliance with the requirements of Article 4 of the 1970 Convention (most commonly the translation of attachments to court orders) in view of Australia's declaration pursuant to Article 33, to exclude the operation of paragraph 2 of Article 4. In addition, for some States/Territories difficulties are posed by the high costs of arranging evidence to be taken from witnesses who are geographically distanced from the relevant court. On one occasion an expert witness required a certified interpreter of a high degree of competence in view of the complexity of the evidence, the costs of which were ordered to be paid by the requesting party. As the witness did not qualify as an expert witness according to the laws of the Contracting State from which the letter of request originated, the payment of the witness' costs as an expert witness were resisted and argued to be irrecoverable. | Australie |
| | A considerable problem in international relations still exists in the consequences of the aerospace decision. Consequently, situations have arisen which involve the repeated taking of evidence on the basis of U.S. law, whereby in our view the Convention would have been applicable (a) and b)). Besides this, problems involving costs (c)) and in the carrying out of requests in Germany (d)) have arisen. a) Pre-trial discovery of documents - Consideration should be given, for one, to the issuance of documents found in Germany in the context of pre-trial discovery of documents, which are requested extraterritorially directly pursuant to U.S. law. Discovery of this kind not only circumvents the German Reservation on Article 23 of the Convention, it also leads to extraordinarily high costs for the companies concerned and to concerns regarding data protection. b) Hearing of witness outside the provisions of the Convention - Secondly, the hearing of witnesses in Germany by U.S. attorneys pursuant to U.S. civil procedural law should be mentioned. The taking of evidence in Germany for a U.S. civil proceeding and the preliminary discovery phase must, in our view, be conducted via international law channels; these offer sufficient possibilities. For one, a consular hearing can be conducted pursuant to the German-American exchange of diplomatic memoranda. Furthermore, the witness can be heard via avenues provided under mutual legal assistance. A request for mutual legal assistance for the hearing by a German court can be conveyed to the competent German Central Authority (Article 3 and 4 of the Convention). Finally, pursuant to Article 17 of the Convention, the commissioner of a U.S. court may hear a witness if the authorisation of the competent German Central Authority has been obtained beforehand. The declaration on Article 17 submitted by the Federal Republic of Germany upon entry of the instrument of ratification reads as follows (Federal Gazette 1979 II p. 780): "A commissioner of the requesting court may only take evidence pursuant to Article 17 of the Convention, if the Central Authority of the Land, in which the taking of evidence is to be conducted, has given its consent. Such consent can include conditions. The local court, in whose district official business is to be conducted as a result of a request for mutual legal assistance, is authorised to supervise the preparation and conducting of the taking of evidence. Pursuant to Article 19 second sentence of the Convention, a member of such court may participate in such taking of evidence." If a U.S. hearing is conducted without the knowledge of German judicial authorities, this constitutes a violation of German jurisdictional competency. This applies regardless of whether the witness concerned voluntarily took part in the hearing. c) Costs incurred through the taking of evidence in the USA - In one particular case, a German court requested the conducting of the taking of evidence in the USA. This was carried out by an attorney who acted as commissioner. The extraordinarily high costs were not presented to the German agency in advance. If it or the parties had had prior knowledge of the expected costs, the taking of evidence would possibly have been omitted. Here, it is requested that any high costs which would be incurred due to the taking of evidence in the requested State be provided in advance. d) Supplying of technical aids - Requests sent to Germany often entail the desire of U.S. courts and lawyers to apply their national procedural law without modification (e.g. cross-examination by U.S. attorneys, drafting of a word transcript by a special stenographer, additional electronic recording of the hearing (video or audio), request made to those performing the hearing to verify all statements through the presentation of documents, language of the hearing English, taking of oaths pursuant to U.S. law). However, this has organisational limitations. The taking of evidence can certainly be performed by special means, but the preparation of the appropriate – often complicated – technical and actual aids is subject to limitations on availability. If the indication is then given that e.g. a special court stenographer and electronic recording – provided the consent of all those concerned has been given – can in fact be used, but that the requesting U.S. side and not the requested German side is obligated to provide such aids, the request is frequently no longer followed up on by the U.S. side. Better coordination in advance is recommended. | Etat / State |
| | The U.S. Central Authority believes it is able to provide evidence in most circumstances in a form compatible with foreign legal systems. Evidentiary requests that are received by the Central Authority are typically referred to the United States Attorney's Office for the federal judicial district in which the evidence subject to the request is located. In most circumstances the United States Attorney's office will attempt to obtain compliance of an evidentiary request through voluntary means, without having to rely upon the compulsory mechanisms available through the domestic judicial system. In many cases, the evidence can be obtained relatively quickly and with minimal difficulty. Not all requests, however, can be easily complied with. In particular, when the requested entity to whom the evidentiary request is directed refuses to provide voluntary compliance, it becomes necessary to go to court in order to utilize mechanisms available only through court auspices, such as the issuance of an appropriate subpoena or the like to compel compliance. At times, this can result in considerable delays in the United States' ability to respond to the evidentiary request. In addition, other difficulties can arise, and compliance delayed, when the request seeks information that may be subject to disclosure limitations or substantive privileges. For example, requests that seek information involving company confidential information or privileged information may require significant litigation to ascertain whether it can be compelled. Beyond that, not all requests can be complied with. A complicated evidentiary request, such as a request for detailed banking information from a United States domestic entity, may be so difficult or time consuming that it will be significantly delayed if it can be accomplished at all. Other evidentiary requests seek to have the Central Authority or the U.S. Attorney's Office to which the requests are referred do more than obtain existing documents or physical evidence or to ask specific questions of a witness. Such requests may ask the Central Authority to perform research or to hire experts to render opinions on complex matters. We believe such requests go beyond the scope of the Convention, or may put unreasonable demands on the United States Attorney's Offices, and will usually be returned to the sending state. An example of such a request that must be returned to the requesting entity as beyond the scope of the Convention or being beyond what the Central Authority can be reasonably requested to perform, might include a request that an accounting expert be retained to render an opinion as to the | Etats-Unis |

However, we have been informed by Polish courts about following practical difficulties: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Delays: There are some Countries where the execution of requests to obtain evidence takes too long time. In several cases, letters asking for information whether the request to obtain evidence is to be executed or not have been disregarded. 2. Problems involving costs: In several cases Polish courts have not been informed in advance about extraordinarily high costs of the taking of evidence by the authorities of the requested Country. If Polish Court or the parties had a prior knowledge of the amount of extraordinarily high costs, the taking of evidence would possibly have been omitted. 3. Sending documents from the requested Country: In some cases, documents establishing the execution of requests of Polish courts to obtain evidence have been forwarded to Polish Embassies or to the Polish Ministry of Justice, instead of forwarding them directly to the requesting Court in Poland. Sometimes, in such cases, the information included is not sufficient to identify the case the above-mentioned documents refer to. In order to avoid such misunderstandings it is very important to specify the name of the requesting court and the reference number of the case. 4. Translations: In such cases, requests for taking evidence addressed to Poland have not been translated into Polish. 5. Specific requirements: Sometimes the authorities of requested Countries require documents not foreseen by the Convention to be attached to the request. In particular, requests to obtain evidence addressed to the USA need to be accompanied with an annex including detailed facts of the case. | Pologne |

Whilst the case mentioned in the response to question [see the full replies on the Conference's website] does not discuss the exclusiveness or the mandatory nature of the Convention, the reasoning of the Court, which was based on the inherent jurisdiction of the court, would seem to suggest that the Convention would not be regarded as having mandatory effect as between Hongkong and a party to the Convention. It is also to be noted that the language used in Article 1(1) of the Service Convention is not used in the Convention. | Chine (Hongkong) |

Au contraire, par un arrêt du 9 avril 1993, la cour d'appel de Versailles [...] a estimé qu'un tel recueil de preuves sur un territoire autre que le territoire national, était possible en dehors du cadre de la Convention. En effet, la Cour a considéré que la Convention de la Haye du 18 mars 1970 sur l'obtention des preuves à l'étranger en matière civile ou commerciale, " loin d'appréhender l'administration de la preuve dans son ensemble, ne réglemen-[tait] que les commissions rogatoires ". Poursuivant son raisonnement, la Cour a considéré qu' " une mesure d'ordre probatoire peut être accomplie librement, dès lors qu'elle n'est pas de nature à porter atteinte à la souveraineté de l'Etat ". Cette jurisprudence a été très critiquée par la doctrine. | France |

For that reason, the 1989 recommendation of the Special Commission that priority be granted to the procedures provided for under the Convention for evidence requests has not been followed except in a few state courts (e.g., New Jersey). All U.S. courts take into account the mechanisms available under the Convention in exercising their discretion with regard to the appropriate discovery mechanism to be applied to the foreign litigants or parties, and they will often intervene to limit discovery in ways that would not have been likely in purely domestic | Etats-Unis |

| | litigation. We believe the recommendation that Article 23 reservations be limited in scope has been useful and urge states with such reservations to consider appropriate limitations that would allow reasonably crafted and limited pretrial evidentiary requests to be executed. In some circumstances, states may have made a reservation under Article 23 as a result of confusion with the term "pretrial" when used in conjunction with the U.S. judicial system, and have erroneously assumed that it meant prior to the initiation of a judicial proceeding. Once understood as merely referring to the obtaining of evidence prior to a formal testimonial proceeding before a judicial officer, but subsequent to the initial filing of a complaint, states may find that their Article 23 reservations can be appropriately limited. In this regard we note that complex cases (or significant issues within such cases) pending in state and federal courts in the United States have with some frequency been finally adjudicated by the court without the need for a trial or other formal evidentiary hearing. In such cases, the court will adjudicate the case on the basis of summary judgment motions which often rely heavily upon the evidence obtained by the parties during pretrial proceedings. The U.S. Supreme Court has favorably viewed such summary dispositions. See generally, Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317 (1986); Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, 477 U.S. 242 (1986); Matsushita Electric Industrial Co. v. Zenith, 475 U.S. 574 (1986). | |

| | In practice, a limitation of the reservation under Article 23 of the Convention would not be advisable. Experience has shown that requests for pre-trial discovery may also not be completed if such requests are honoured under certain conditions (in particular, sufficient discovery of the documents requested) in the requested State. A pre-trial discovery of documents involves specifically a discovery, which causes problems to even the most minimal restrictions. What is ordinarily expected is a performance – unacceptable to Germany – pursuant to U.S. procedural law. Therefore, in practice, there has been only a limited application of the Convention in proceedings being conducted in the USA. | Allemagne |

| | There are no U.S. court rulings regarding the application of the Convention to arbitration proceedings. This question has arisen under 28 U.S.C. 1782, however. That provision, which is independent of the Convention, allows "any interested person" to seek judicial assistance from a U.S. court in obtaining evidence. "for use in a proceeding in a foreign or international tribunal." A few courts have had occasion to consider whether an arbitrator or arbitration tribunal may be considered a "foreign or international tribunal" within the meaning of Section 1782. The first court to consider the issue, a district court in New York, answered that question in the affirmative in 1994. That decision has been superseded, however, by a 1999 ruling of the Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit (which includes New York) that "Congress did not intend for [Section 1782] to apply to an arbitral body established by private parties." The Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals reached the same conclusion in another 1999 decision. See, Republic of Kazakhstan v. Biedermann Int'l, 168 F.ed 880 (5th Cir. 1999). This issue continues to be the subject of scholarly debate in the United States, and courts in other judicial circuits could conceivably reach a result that is contrary to the Second and Fifth Circuits. Nevertheless, even in that event, it is unlikely that evidentiary requests referred directly to the Central Authority by an arbitral panel would be considered subject to the Convention. In that regard, the term, "foreign or international tribunal", as used in Section 1782, would appear to be broader than the term "judicial authority", as used in the Convention. | 9. Can representatives take part (Art. 8)? | We consider the participation of representatives of the requesting Court in the execution of the request for obtaining of evidence as completely permissible and even desirable. On the one hand, the requesting Court is assisted in a more entire way, for instance, when participating in a hearing of a person, the personal apperception of the representative of the requesting Court of the behaviour of the person, the manner the person gives the answers, the possibility to ask additional questions as a result of the given answers, etc. will be of importance for the more complete clarification of the circumstances and for the settlement of the dispute. On the other hand, the requested authority will also be facilitated in the obtaining of evidence, because additional questions or circumstances may occur in the process of the execution, which in direct cooperation with the present representative of the requesting Court will be clarified without any waste of time for receiving additional information. If we take the same case of obtaining evidence – hearing of a person, the representative of the requesting Court may clarify some facts with details to the executing magistrate, or to help in formulating the questions for the hearing more strictly and more thoroughly, etc. | Bulgarie |

| | If the hearing of witnesses takes place before a judicial officer of the Court of First Instance, Hongkong law does not provide for the participation by judicial officers of the requesting court in the conduct of examination. It is not unusual, however, for a foreign court to nominate its own judicial officer as examiner to conduct the hearing. In such cases, the Hongkong court will then appoint such examiner to sit outside the limits of the Court of First Instance. The solicitor, being agent of the requesting party, will be informed of the hearing and is usually present. | | Unknown . In the light of the restricted use of electronic means in Dutch civil procedure today, it is unlikely that such request will be accepted. The Netherlands is actually discussing the introduction in domestic cases of interviewing witnesses at distance using modern devices like teleconferencing. | Pays-Bas |
| | [F] [Le Canada n'est pas partie à cette Convention] Ontario : Douteux à l'heure actuelle, mais probable à l'avenir . La question principale serait l'authentification - comment pouvons-nous être sûrs d'où ou de qui la demande provient? Une télécopie poserait moins de problèmes qu'une transmission électronique, bien que certaines règles de la cour exigent des sceaux qui n'apparaissent pas facilement sur les télécopies. Québec : Nous n'en avons encore jamais reçu. [E] [Canada is not Party to this Convention] Ontario : Doubtful at present, but likely in the future . The main question would be authentication - how can we be sure where / who the request is coming from? A fax would be less problematic than an electronic transmission, though some court rules require seals that are not readily apparent on faxes. Quebec : We have not received any to date. | Canada (Québec, Ontario) |
| 11. Taking of evidence by e-technology? | Requests to take evidence by audio link and video link have been received and satisfied in Australia. A noticeable increase in the requests to take evidence by video link has been observed. Similar requests have frequently been made by Australian judicial authorities of other Contracting States and these have not always been met. | Australie |

| | Le canton de Saint-Gall a accepté dans deux cas d'exécuter une audition de témoins par vidéoconférence . Le canton de Zurich nous indique un cas. De l'avis de l'Office fédéral de la justice, dans la mesure où les autorités suisses disposent de l'infrastructure nécessaire, il n'y a pas de raison de refuser de donner suite à une demande requérant l'utilisation de nouvelles technologies. L'Office fédéral de la justice a par ailleurs donné suite à ce genre de requête dans le cadre de l'article 17 CLaH 70. | Suisse |
| | Norway has received one request (in 2002) to obtain evidence (interrogation) by the use of video-link . The request was complied with . | Norvège |
| | No. The Judiciary in Hongkong will give favourable consideration to a request to take evidence by video link . | Chine (Hongkong) |
| | U.S. courts allow many forms of electronic technologies, including videotaped depositions, teleconferencing, electronic filing, and electronic exchange of documents . Whether an evidence request seeking the utilization of new technologies can be fulfilled will depend upon the nature of the request, the availability and cost of the technology , whether the individual or entity with the evidence voluntarily submits to such techniques, and, to the extent such a request requires the intervention of a court, whether the procedure will be authorized by the appropriate judicial officer. | Etats-Unis |

| 12. Recomm. or new instrument for the use of NT? | Yes, especially in relation to video and audio links from a witness in an overseas jurisdiction but also to facilitate the response to requests from overseas judicial authorities. We are conscious that there will be implications in the taking of video evidence abroad for such matters as the location where evidence is deemed to be taken and given, whether perjury is actionable in the jurisdiction of the requesting judicial authority and whether privilege extends to such witness statements. | Australie |
| | We definitely consider that the adoption of a Recommendation for the use of modern communication technologies is useful, with a view of shortening the period for receiving the request for obtaining of evidence and for its execution, as well as for the returning of the execution. The introduce of such new instrument is to consider the specific character of these means. | Bulgarie |
| | Yes. It would be useful if evidence may be taken by judicial officers of the requesting court through video link provided that such evidence is admissible under its law (lex fori). There is no court rule in Hongkong against taking of evidence by electronic means by an examiner appointed by the court as they are sitting outside the limits of the Hongkong courts. The requesting party should make it clear in the request to the authority in Hongkong that it wishes to use this special method of taking evidence. Finally, the use of video link services is subject to the Rules, Practice Directions and fees imposed by the jurisdiction in which such services are required. A recommendation will serve as a reminder that State Parties to the Convention should actively consider the ways and means of applying the Convention in a more effective and efficient manner, including the use of electronic media. | Chine (Hongkong) |
| | The impact of new technologies and their potential use in the context of the Convention are considered important issues that should be addressed. As modern communication technologies are being introduced to the MSAR courts, the adoption of a recommendation for the promotion of the use of such technologies is envisaged favourably as it could contribute to accelerate the domestic procedure for adoption of legislation on the use of electronic means. | Chine (Macao) |
| | International civil procedure needs speedy actions. The use of modern communication technology might be of great help. | Pays-Bas |

| | Les avis des cantons sur la question sont partagés. De l'avis de l'Office fédéral de la Justice, une Recommandation visant à promouvoir l'utilisation des technologies de communication modernes pourrait être utile . Il ne nous semble en revanche pas nécessaire d'élaborer un nouvel instrument qui aborderait ces questions plus spécifiquement. | Suisse |
| | A recommendation would be useful but we do not believe that a new instrument in the form of a convention should be developed. A protocol between the authorities of the Contracting States could be envisaged defining the conditions under which requests by electronic means to obtain evidence abroad could be accepted. | Portugal |
| | La portée de la recommandation visant à promouvoir l'utilisation des technologies de communications modernes n'est pas indiquée. Si elle doit s'étendre à l'ensemble des procédures de la Convention, il semble qu'une telle recommandation ne serait pas suffisante , les juges ayant besoin d'une règle admettant leur utilisation. Et si le but de la recommandation est celui de promouvoir un développement dans ce sens dans le droit de la procédure des Etats parties, des divergences entre ceux-ci peuvent certes surgir, affectant l'uniformité dans l'application de la Convention. Par conséquent, l'élaboration d'un nouvel instrument international sera nécessaire si on veut arriver non seulement à un traitement plus rapide de la demande d'obtention de preuves à l'étranger mais aussi à garantir la certitude des divers éléments de la transmission et de la réception. Notamment, l'authenticité de la communication et de son contenu, l'attestation de son transmission et réception intégrales et de son exécution, ainsi que du moment précis de ces actes, questions qui sont à étudier par une future Commission Spéciale. | Espagne |
| | Yes, we support the promotion of the modern communication technology. Furthermore, we find that it would be useful to include these issues in a new instrument that is found suitable for that purpose. | Finlande |
| | Yes. In our opinion the use of modern technologies should be promoted. | Norvège |
| | Yes, we support the promotion of the modern communication technology. | Pologne |
| | The use of modern communication technologies should be promoted. Perhaps a recommendation could have just as much impact as a completely new instrument. But this question could be looked into at more depth where also art 10.4 and 17.4 of Council Regulation (EC) No 1206/2001 of 28 May 2001 on cooperation between the courts of the Member States in the taking of evidence in civil or commercial matters could serve as a basis for the discussions. | Suède |
| | The United States recognizes that new technologies have an increasing role to play in the litigative process both here and in other States, and, indeed, many courts in the United States have begun to explore and implement the use of electronic technologies, for such purposes as electronic filing and serving of court documents, and the obtaining of evidence through various electronic means. In any event, we would anticipate that any new technology must be mutually compatible and acceptable to the requesting and forum States. The form for such an arrangement or understanding would have to be considered based on its content and purpose. | Etats-Unis |
| | Faute de besoin avéré, il ne paraît guère utile d'adopter une recommandation visant à promouvoir l'utilisation des technologies de communication modernes. En effet, de telles modalités de transmission des commissions rogatoires ne pourraient pas complètement se substituer à la voie postale, notamment lorsque des pièces accompagnent la demande. Sur un plan pratique, il n'est pas certain qu'une saisine par télécopie ou courrier électronique favorise, en soi, un traitement plus rapide de la demande. En effet, les délais de transmissions par voie postale sont généralement très brefs, contrairement à ce qu'il en est des délais d'exécution. Dans tous les cas, l'élaboration d'un nouvel instrument serait nécessaire afin d'aborder ces questions plus spécifiquement. | France |
| | L'utilisation de technologies de communication moderne serait utile et envisageable pour l'avenir, à condition que l'identité et l'authentification de l'autorité expéditrice soient certaines (signature électronique). L'adoption d'une telle recommandation ou d'un nouvel instrument aurait une utilité certaine alors qu'elle permettrait l'établissement d'un cadre légal uniforme notamment quant aux règles de sécurité et de validité juridique. | Luxembourg |

|----------|---|---------------------------------|
| | In the use of modern telecommunications, a distinction must be made between a request and the performance thereof. We do not see any benefit in the electronic transmission of requests. This may be worthy of consideration for service of process, since this occurs en masse and is dependant upon a swift transmission, but these considerations usually do not apply to requests for mutual assistance. These requests comprise a comparably small quantity of the whole of judicial co-operation, are often quite voluminous, but are under less time constraints than service of process. Delivery by mail – if needed as a rush delivery by private courier – seems sufficient. Above all, a swift transmission by no means guarantees swift processing/completion. If the requested authority is not equipped with the necessary personnel, hardware and expertise, then this – and not the transmission – is the main reason for extensive processing. What is typical in these instances is that enquiries as to the status of the request – also submitted via fax or email – are not answered for months, and in some cases not at all. The implementation of technical aids is however conceivable particularly in the completion of requests for hearings. As it is however, under the existing Convention, the use of video and telephone conferences is possible, since German civil procedural law provides for this option and alternatively such technical methods require the taking of evidence in a special form. Due to high costs and limited technical provisions however, use must be limited to special circumstances. In view of existing possibilities, no need is seen for critical action to be taken here either. | Allemagne |
| | [F] [Le Canada n'est pas partie à cette Convention] Ontario: Peut-être - cela dépend de la mesure dans laquelle la résolution serait précise. Nous aimerions entendre plus d'arguments avant de déterminer si un nouvel instrument serait nécessaire, ou simplement un guide pour interpréter la Convention en vigueur à la lumière des nouvelles technologies. Québec: Bien que le Québec ne soit pas partie à la Convention [...] le gouvernement du Québec est de façon générale favorable à promouvoir l'utilisation des nouvelles technologies de communication. Dans le domaine plus particulier qui est ici abordé, le Comité de révision de la procédure civile, qui a rendu public son rapport le 28 août 2001, a indiqué être favorable à l'utilisation des technologies de l'information dont la fiabilité peut être assurée notamment pour échanger et communiquer certains actes de procédure. [E] [Canada is not party to this Convention] Ontario: Possibly - it depends on how specific the resolution was. We would like to hear more discussion before knowing if a new instrument would be needed, or merely a guide to interpreting the present Convention in the light of new technologies. Quebec: Although Quebec is not a party to the Convention [...] the Government of Quebec is generally receptive to promoting the use of the new communication technologies. In the particular area in question here, the committee to review the civil procedure, which made its report public on August 28, 2001, stated that it favoured the use of information technologies whose reliability can be assured particularly in exchanging and communicating certain procedural documents. | Canada (Québec, Ontario) |
